

Dejan Eskic is a senior research fellow and scholar at the University of Utah's Kem C. Gardner Policy Institute. His professional career has focused on providing the best information to key decision makers, whether they'd be local or state officials, executives of national development firms. He also serves as an adjunct professor of Real Estate Market Analysis at the University of Utah and is the Chief Economist for the SL Board of Realtors.

Utah Economic update, past, current, and future trends for the Utah economy as well as residential and commercial real estate.